Three Sure Fire Indicators that You Are Headed Toward Divorce!!!

Your spouse's financial behavior shifts suddenly:

- a. He/she no longer direct deposits their entire paycheck to the joint bank account;
- b. He/she puts you on a budget and demands an accounting of all your spending;
- c. He/she takes out large cash withdrawals;
He/she pays for only their own credit card bills –or better yet, the mail now goes to the office;
- d. He/she goes on more business trips and has greater travel & entertainment expenses than usual;
- e. He/she blindsides you with gifts and trips;
- f. He/she reduces contributions to savings or retirement – excess cash is spent or is socked away somewhere else;
- g. He/she increases debts because it is a “smart” financial move during times of low interest rates.

2. Your spouse complains consistently about money:

- a. declining income earning potential,
- b. reduced bonuses,
- c. company layoffs,
- d. decline in revenues,
- e. loss of clients,
- f. diminished sales territory,
- g. the economy,
- h. suddenly, age factor in their business,
- i. concern about your “rampant” spending, etc.

3. You find evidence that your spouse has consulted with an attorney. No offers to go to counseling, not being your friend anymore, and you now have real evidence your spouse is proactive about divorce.
